"221. People honestly thought I had something they didn't. They thought I had some special qualities that were elusive to the common man. of course, this couldn't have been further from the truth.

222. Being part of England's royal family was a blessing and a curse. I hope I served the office well, as the people's princess. There was and still is so much need out there in the world. I didn't like the intrusive attention but I can see now that it served its purpose."

"223. Food doesn't come as manna from heaven. You have to grow it and this is a lot of work. Treat your farm workers well. They are feeding you.

224. Wearing fancy clothes to an air conditioned office is better than working in the hot sun? Are you sure about that?

225. No matter how processed the food gets, it always starts as real food. That bag of greasy potato chips started out as a real potato, harvested from the ground. Be grateful for it.

226. Going back to 224, why is it that there is such a pay gap between the two workers? Why don't we value the work of the farm laborers?

227. How you take care of or fail to take care of those who toil in the fields says a lot about a society."

"229. I preached what I knew to be true. Now that I have a fresh perspective, I see that I was honestly trying to help those who were searching for truth. We were close. If it was a snake, it would have bitten us.
230. I talked frequently about turning away from sin. I don't think turning away from negative things is a bad thing.

231. I preached about Jesus every time I spoke. Now that I've finally met him, I can say that he is everything you could have possibly hoped he could be. He is compassionate, understanding and wise in his ways. I Am pleased to be in his company and at his service."

"When you cross over, as I recently did, you regain your clarity again and can see the whole picture for the first time in what was my case, a very long time.

239. Are the days of tradition finally over? Can we let old traditions go and start new ones that are more in line with today's society?

240. Now I can dye my hair a crazy color and no one will think it is conduct unbecoming a prince."
